- 100 Nasir-al-Deen Ismail Shah Abul Futtah, two small Coins, fine, different types. These coins were struck in the name of the Afghan Noble who was first elected as king by the Deccan chiefs in their rebellion against Mahomed-ibn Taghlak of Delhi in 1347. These pieces are extremely rare and interesting historically as illustrating the fact that Nasir-al-Deen Ismail did assume the symbols of royalty, though it is recorded that he resigned his position after a few months in favour of Alla-ad-Deen Hussun Gungoo Bahmun Shah, who founded the Bahminee dynasty. Alla-ad-Deen Bahmun Shah, six small Coins, the first issue of this king ; two Coins, finer and of later issue, bearing name of Ahsun Shah, all rare ; eight Coins of Ahsun Shah ; Mahomed Shah I, thirteen Coins of two sizes and different types, all early rare coins 23

 though called Nizam in Ferishta's history, puts the name Ahmed on his coins, perhaps out of compliment to his ancestors. Mahomed Shah II, Coin, 1st size, 878; another of 2nd size, 868; another of 3rd size, 873; another of 4th size, 873; it is rare to get a complete set all dated, 21

 Mahmud Shah's name but are somewhat doubtful.* Alla-oolla Shah (4), four different sizes, the smallest size is dated partly 929 or 930, rare. Kallim-oolla-Shah (7),

LATER DECCAN MAHOMEDAN KINGS, SUCCESSORS OF THE BAHMINEES OF GULBURGH.

NOTICE.—It is surmised that the Coins in this Series are wholly unpublished, there is no notice of them in the British Museum Catalogues, or in any other books known to the present owner. The absolute identity of some of these coins is therefore attended with difficulty; the inscriptions are new and obscure. The present possessor acquired them during many years residence in the Deccan, where these kings ruled, and he has given them much study; in deciphering the legends and ascribing these coins he was much assisted by a learned Munshi. There can be little doubt as to the several dynasties to which these coins are assigned, but in some cases to fix a certain sovereign of a dynasty is much more difficult and doubtful, this is especially the case as regards the Nizam Shahis dynasty of Ahmednugger. Here, therefore, these coins are grouped together, and the same plan is followed in a doubtful lot of coins of either Beejapoor or Golkonda. It should be noted that as nearly all these later Deccan kings were of the Shiah sect their inscriptions bear some allusion to this form of Mahommedanism. This proviso must be therefore understood.

BEEJAPOOR. ADIL SHAHIS.

COPPER.

- 106 Ensoff Adil Shah, Coin, doubtful, the late R. Stuart Poole agreed in this ascription. Adil Sultan, small Coin, rev. Sultan al Anzum, there can be little doubt but that this coin was struck by this dynasty in early times. Ali Adil Shah I, $\frac{965}{1557}$, four Coins, 1st size, one with a date, perhaps 965; others (2), 2nd size; others (2), 3rd size; others (8), the inscriptions are all similar, and the sizes and weights of these coins approximate to those of the Bahminees. Secunder Adil Shah, a late king, 1st size (2); 2nd size (2), the identity of these coins is more doubtful; nine more Coins of Ali Adil Shah I, 1st size (3); 2nd size (5); 3rd size (1), similar to the preceding of this king, but not so fine 28

AHMEDNUGGER. NIZAM SHAHIS.

COPPER.

107 Eight Coins, several dated, bnt absolute ascription doubtful, so placed collectively, 1st size, Boorhan Nizam Shah I and II; Moortaza Nizam Shah, 1st and 2nd; seven Coins of the 2nd size, several dated of the same type as the preceding, most of the coins bear the mint mark of Moortaza Nugger clearly indicating their origin, others bear inscriptions, proving the same source 15

108 Eight Coins of 2nd size, later issue, ascription doubtful; six others of 3rd size of earlier kings, three dated, ascription doubtful and some are struck in the transition period of Mogul influences; thirteen more Coins of the Nizam Shahis, some struck under Mogul influences, nearly all these coins bear the mint of Nugger 27

GOLCONDAH. KOOTUB SHAHIS.

COPPER.

109 Sultan Koolly Kootub Shah $\frac{918}{1512}$, founder of the dynasty, 2 Coins, trace of dates, medium size, mint "Darul Sultanat Golkonda," very rare. Ibrahim Koolly Sultan, $\frac{1550}{957}$, this king's coins are found in three different types of three sizes, approximating to those of the Bahminees of Gulburga; 3 Coins of the 1st series, beaded and ornamented, of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd sizes, the latter very scarce; 3 Coins of the 2nd series, plain type, of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd sizes; 3 Coins of the 3rd series, a plain type but different of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd sizes, these nine coins are typical of this king's copper. Square Coin, medium size, bearing the name of Ibrahim Koolly Sultan, of an abnormal type, and very rare, this would appear to be an imitation of the square coinage of Akbar, all picked 12

- 110 Mahomed Koolly Kootub Shah, $\frac{1580}{988}$. There are two series of this king's copper, in three sizes, each similar to those of Ibrahim Koolly, from the constant repetition of the word Domurrah on all the coins, they are remarkable, and easily identified: 1st series, beaded and ornamented, 4 Coins of the 1st and 2nd sizes only, two specimens of each), 2nd series, 6 Coins, 2 sets of the three sizes of each coin, full inscriptions, 10 Coins, picked, of Mahomed Koolly; Abdoolah Kootub Shah, 2 Coins, of 1068, and mint Dar ul Sultanat Haiderabad, scarce 12
- 111 Ibrahim Koolly Sultan, additional Coins: 1st series ornamented, seven Coins of the 1st size, six of the 2nd size, some fine; 2nd series plain type, six of the 1st size, one of the 3rd size; 3rd series, plain type, different, eight of the 1st size, five of the 2nd size, one of the 3rd size, small sizes are rare 34
- 112 Mahomed Koolly Sultan, additional Coins. Four of the 1st size, four of the 2nd size, some fine. Bereed Shahis of Beeder, (1), very rare, the only specimen found of this dynasty, bears inscription, "Bereed Shah Sultan" on the obverse. Umm'ad Shahis of Ellichpur (1), the inscription here is more liable to doubt, but is described thus by competent authority. Twelve Coins of doubtful ascription, probably some of the Bahminees, some of Golconda, some early Mogul, all early Deccan types 23
- 113 Coins of a doubtful dynasty, probably either of Beejapoor or Golconda. Eight Copper, of 3 sizes and weights, similar to those preceding, of Beejapoor and Golconda, obv. inscription, "Alee Abee Talib," rev. "Assad-oollah-al Ghalib," three of 1st, 2nd, and 3rd sizes, three more similar sizes, and two others (odd), all of an early Deccan dynasty, probably either of the two above named Beejapoor, or Golcondah 8
